Marbie, Ensign James A. Hand, Jr., Ensign William P. Cronan, Ensign U. S. Macy, Ensign C. A. Abele, Chief Boatswain William E. Hill, Gunner F. T. Applegate, and Carpenter George H. Warford.

There are several culisted men of the navy and three or four civilians who will be called by Admiral Schley whose mames are not included on this list. All of the officers named, with the exception of Refer Admirals Waisson and Barker, Captain Cook, Chaplain Helm, and Lieutenand Harlow, were aboard the Vixen.

The testimony of the two officers last named is expected to be of much importance to Admiral Schley, By them twill be shown that the log of the Vixe.

as it now appears in the Navy Depar-ment records, does not accord with the notes of the battle as it progressed, made by Lieutenant Commander Sharp and Lieutenant Harlow. The original notes, it is said, were edited in the Bureau of Navigation and then made a part of the Vixen's log.

Vixen was on the extreme west of the blockading line, and, realizing that she was no fit match for the big Spanish cruisers, her commander withdrew beyond firing distance and carefully obfight, dictating the incidents as they occurred. This is admitted to have been the most accurate and complete report of the hattle. These notes described the part which the Brooklyn took, its position, and the time when Sampson arrived, a half hour after the last Spanish ship had struck her colors. These original notes, it is charged, have been so altered that they are scarcely recognizable, and made to suit the side of Admiral Sampson. The discrepancy between the original notes made ut the time of the battle by officers aboard the Vixen and the log of that vessel as it appears in the Navy Department will, it is expected, go a long dis-tance toward substantiating the charge of consultacy against Admiral Schley.

omplete list of the Navy Department witnesses was announced vesterday by Captain Lemly, the judge advocate of the court. The list is made up of fortysix names, and includes 5 rear admirals 10 eaptains, 9 commanders, 8 licutement mmanders, 1 captain of marines, 9 Heutemants, I junior Heutenant, I ensign, 1 acting boatswain, and I chief quarter-

BESIEGED BY MRS. NATION

New York's Police Commissioner Has an Exciting Visit.

The Kansas Reformer Blames Mr Murphy, Who, in Turn, Blames Gov ernor Odell-Other Members of the City Government Budly Frightened

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.-Mrs, Carrie Na tion, the Kansas saloon smasher, broke into New York today by way of the Pennsylvania Rallroad ferry, which lands it the foot of West Twenty-third Street. he had come up from Baltimore to mee several dime museum men and theatrical managers who were anxious to get her on exhibition, and reached Jersey City at 7 o'clock in the morning. The first man-ager to capture her was Manager Furong. Then a man came in search of nuseum freaks, and finally Robert Grau escorted her to the Victoria Hotel and fired a suite of rooms for her.

It was evident before long that Mrs. Nation had no use for New York. She left town hurriedly and unexpectedly. much to the disgust of the theatrical men, who believed they had her under contract to deliver lectures and do other things. During her short stay in town she succeeded in frightening Acting Mayor Guggenheimer. Police Commissioner Murphy. John L. Sullivan, and old "Mother" Mc-Intyre, who runs a grog shop over on Cherry Hill. When the acting mayor heard that Mrs. Nation was in town he catted Roundsman Kennel and said: Officer, if that woman Nation appears,

But she did go to olice headquarters, where she made ommissioner Murphy very uncomforta-

Just as she left town she was asked about her plans. "W dl," she said, hesitatingly, as if undecided as to her future p ans, "I'm go-ing to take the train to Onio. I am going to College Corners, Ohio, where I intend to speak on Thursday night. I have left a note for Archbishop Corrigan written to him, telling him that I want to have a little talk with him. I suppose I'll get an answer to the note when I get back to New York. Before I come back I'm going to speak in three Ohio towns. I'll probably be back Saturday

After about five minutes' wait she was ushered into the commissioner's private office, where he sat at his desk with an expression of painful expectancy. There was an exchange of handshakes, cordial on the part of Mrs. Nation and suspicious on the part of Commissioner Murphy. She sat close beside his desk and beamed at him over her gold-rimmed spectacles in the midst of a portentous silence.

"Mr. Murphy," she finally said, "we are fellow travelers to the grave—you and I. There's a time a-coming when we've got to give an account of our stewardship, and we ought to do as little harm here below as possible. And there's a great responsibility resting on you. Do you know it?"

Colonel Murphy looked as though some

He swung around toward his desk, pulling at his moustache.
"You will not discuss the crime and murder shops of this great city?" cried
Mrs. Nation, in despairing amazement.
The commissioner faced her again, "If I have any information to give you, I'll answer one or two short questions."
Mrs. Nation moved nearer, "Why don't you shut the saloons on Sunday?" she asked suddenly.
"That's the Governor's business," answered Mr. Murphy very sharply,
"It's yours, too," said Mrs. Nation, severely, "You have a chance to do good

Mr. Murphy raised his foreinger and shook it vigorously. "Now stop it," he cried. "Don't quote scripture at me, madam. Go back to Kansas and get it off at your husband."

Mrs. Nation gave a little laugh. "I have no husband, she said, very simply, Colonel Murphy grunted angrily to himself and plowed among the papers on his neek. Colonel Murphy was aroused. He sat up suddenly and flercely. "Oh, no toubt," he remarkes with fine sarcasm, yeing his questioner from head to foot. 'Oh of course." th, of course."
"I know it," said Mrs. Nation, calmly.

"I know it, said Mrs. Nation, calmly. "I'm fifty-five and I'll wager you're eighty-five if you're a day. But there's no shame in being old, my father." The police commissioner afforded the joint-smasher the prospect of the back of his head. Then, with his head still turned: "What do you want here anyway? I have business to attend to to-day."

"Well," said Mrs. Nation, "I want to "Well," said Mrs. Nation. "I want to exhort you to close the saloons on Sunday-yes, and on Monday and all other days. Oh, the saloons, the places that manufacture wine and ruin men and break up homes! Why don't you close them, you, an old, grey-haired man." Once more the commissioner turned on his inquisitor. "I won't sit here and be lectured," he roared. "Your mind's not right, anyway."

"You mean to say," enquired Mrs. Nation, "that I'm crazy?"
"I do," was the very emphatic reply. The Kausas smasher took a long, deep breath.
"Well," she cried shrilly, "that's what all the victous, rum-soaked victims of liquor in Kansus think, too, but they are wrong. I've shown them things and I'm going to show you, too."

Colenel Murphy wagged a warning in front of her nose. "Let me tell you front of her nose." Let me tell you going to show you, too."

The lady of the hatchet looked at him for a moment the parently with great pity and then said he a lower tone: "You talk about your law. Does your law protect hell holes such as you have in this city?"
Colonel Murphy motioned to the door. "Sergeant," he cried, "escort Mrs. Nation out." The officer advanced with great gallantry and Mrs. Nation perceived that the interview was at an end. At the door she turned upon the commissioner and delivered a parting shot.

"You're doing the devil's dirty work," she cried. "I'd be ashamed, commissioner, I'd be ashamed,

She passed through the cerridors, lined with officers, and down to her waiting carriage. In a moment she was inside.
"Drive to Archbishop Corrigan's," she called. "I want to give him my picture and talk to him before I leave town."
The carriage rumbled away, every window of police headquarers crowded with watching faces.

ANNOYED GIRLS ON A CAR.

two Men Charged With Disorderly Conduct and Assault.

After having, it is alleged, followed and ade insulting remarks to two young Indies from Seventh Street and Pennsyl vania Avenue northwest to Eighth and Streets southeast on a Capital Traction ear shortly after 9 o'clock last night, two men, who gave the names of James Green and Henry Wilson, were last night arrested by Sergeant Kaucher, of the fifth precinct, and Policemen Edwards and Donovan, charged with having as-saulted one of the young ladies and with having acted in a disorderly manner on the street car.

From the statement given out by the olice of the Fifth precinct last night, the men, both of whom, it is believed, gave fictitious names at the stationhouse, ac costed Miss Beatrice Hill, a seventeen year-old girl residing at 611 Virginia Avenue sontheast, and a companion named Miss Willie Walters, at the transfer station, corner Seventh Street and Pennsyl-vania Avenue northwest. The Waiters girl is a stranger in the city and both girls had started out early in the evening to take a car ride. Upon being approached by the two men at Seventh Street, where they were waiting for a car east, both girls walked away. The men, it is alleged, followed them, and while doing so made several insufting proposals to so made several insuffing proposals to them. When the Georgetown car arrived at the transfer station Miss Fill, accomse made several insufting proposals to them. When the Georgetown car arrived at the transfer station Miss Hill, accompanied by her friend, boarded it and they were quickly follewed by the two men, who, it is said, still continued to annoy the young ladies.

When the girls were seated in the car one of the "mashers," who gave the name of Green, sat down next to Miss Walters and began to nudge her in the side with his elbow, still keeping up his objectionable conversation. His friend, in the meantime, was standing on the rear platform waiting for a passenger to alight who occupied the seat next to Miss Hill. When the car reached the corner of Eighth and I Streets southeast the passenger alighted, and just as the car started the other "masher" made a wild dish for the seat next to Miss Hill.

Both girls by this time were becoming badly frightened by the two men's rowdy actions and the Hill girl, unable to control her nerves any longer, made a leap and landed in the street with terrific force while the car was still in motion. The conductor at once brought his train to a standstill and willing hands assisted the girl, who was found to have been painfully injured about her body as the result of the fall.

Sergeant Kaucher, who noticed the accident, lost no time in arriving upon the scene, and assisted the injured young lady to a nearby drugstore, where her injuries were dressed. In the meantline a passenger on the car who had observed the cause of the trouble told Sergeant Kaucher about he two men and the policeman, immediately placed both under arceat, despite their protests. The patrol wagon was called and after securing the names of the two young ladies Kaucher escorted the men to the stationhouse. Once there the, sergeant charged both men with having assaulted Miss Hill.

It is said that neither of the men is known in the Southeast section, but they are believed to be railroad conductors. The police are endeavoring to secure their correct names.

No end of complaints have been received lately by the police offic weather, when immense crowds journey to the nearby pleasure resorts. The oth-er passengers on the car were pleased with Sergeant Kauch's actions and ex-

BRIGHTWOOD CAR SERVICE.

A Mass Meeting Protests Against the Double Fare.

The Railway Company Declared to Be the Foe of the Public-A Lively Discussion of the Situation at Takoma Park Ball Last Night.

The public mass meeting of citizens living along Brightwood Avenue, in Bright-wood Park, Brightwood, Takoma Park, Woodside, and vicinity, held last night at Takoma Park Hall, in response to a call from J. B. Kinnear, President of the Tokoma Park Association; W. McK. Clay-ton, President Brightwood Park Association, and of Wilton J. Lambert, Acting President of the Brightwood Avenue As sociation, for the purpose of taking action against the proposed change in street car fares to be put into operation by the Brightwood Rallroad Company, was attended by a very large and enthusiastic gathering of residents of that part of the

A large number of ladies were also pres ent, taking a very lively interest in the proceedings. During the meeting resolutions were passed protesting against the "unwarranted and vicious policy of the Brightwood Railroad Company" and ap-pointing a committee of three to lay the matter before Congress. Another resolu-tion proposed nothing less than to boycott the company. The establishment of an automobile line was suggested, but was not acted upon.

J. B. Kinnear called the meeting to order and stated the object of the call in a short and pointed address. Upon motion of Mr. W. J. Lambert, seconded by Dr. E. N. Robinson, Mr. Kinnear was unani-mously chosen chairman and W. McK. Clayton as secretary of the meeting. Mr. Kinnear again stated the purpose of the meeting and said that the Brightwood Railroad Company was their bitterest foe and that resolutions protesting against their impositions, etc., were in order. Wilton J. Lambert offered the following resolutions, which brought forth a lively and lengthy discussion, showing the al-most unanimous opinion of the citizens upon the subject. The resolutions were:

"Whereas the citizens of the District of Columbia and Maryland living along the line of the Brightwood Railroad Company and the Woodside and Forest Glen Railroad Company have for a long period of time suffered and been caused great inconvenience and annoyance by reason of the poor rolling equipment of said roads, and insufficient accommodations afforded, and irregular and unsatisfactory method of running cars, and the general disregard on the part of the company of the rights of the people and of their welfare; and "Whereas the people in the vicinities re-ferred to have been repeatedly refused a Ex-Governor Cameron Speaks on the Constitution.

Not Prepared to Say Whether an Abridged Virginia Electorate Should Be Appented To-What the Convention at Norfolk Intended.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 38. The capacity of the Constitutional Convention half to ay was the size of the audience which assembled to near the debate on the Preamble and Bill of Rights, the pending question being on the amendment offered by Mr. Wysor to "propose" in-the friend and servant of the patrons, the depart of the patrons o absolute and supreme. The plen had been made that to restrict the suffrage would militate against the white people of the southwest and the valley. The time had never come, and he believed it never would, when the people of the State of Virginia would not stand shoulder to shoulder and come to the rescue of their brethren. Neither the Norfolk convention nor any other body of men in the State had any idea that the new constitution would be submitted to a class of people who had never shown any appreciation of their votes when they voted, even for a county constable.

The speech occupied nearly an hour and a half is delivery and frequently the applause necessitated a stop of two or three minutes. When Colonel Cameron took his seat he was at once surrounded by members, who congratulated the speaker on his effort. The consensus of opinion was that the speech was one of the ablest yet delivered in the convention.

At the conclusion of the speech, on motion of Judge Quarles, the committee arose, reported progress, and at 1:40 adjourned.

The Suffrage Committee met this mora-arose, reported progress, and at the autourned.

The Suffrage Committee met this morning and discussed the plan of compromise which had been practically agreed upon.

The property qualification after the two years is not entirely satisfactory, and some of the members want an alternative to go along with it as a permanency.

The educational feature is not strong with many of the members, although as a compromise they were willing to accept it. There is a most amicable spirit existing in the committee, and their discussions and conferences are marked by the last of good humor and courtesy. sions and conferences are marked best of good humor and courtesy.
